

NUM.IS · PERSONAL READING

Name Numerology

The report does three things. It shows the calculation: which numbers come out of your date, and by exactly which operation. It gives a vocabulary: how the numerological tradition describes each of those values — from both sides, as support and as cost. And it asks questions for self-observation, which you will answer, not the report. This is material for thinking and for a conversation about yourself, set out without promises.

How to read this report

This report is put together from two different things, and it is worth telling them apart from the start. The first is arithmetic: a few simple operations on your date of birth that anyone can repeat by hand and get the same result. The second is the descriptions: what the numerological tradition has come to attach to those values over its long practice. The arithmetic is checkable. The descriptions are the language of a tradition, not a measurement of your personality.

Hence the way to read it. Do not look here for a verdict on yourself. Read each section as a supposition to try your own experience against: some of it will land, some will miss, and a miss is just as normal a result as a match. We deliberately show every quality from two sides: the same property that works as a support in one place costs a lot in another. If only the flattering half of a chapter stayed with you, the chapter was read carelessly.

The report is built so that you can come back to it. The sections are independent, the order of reading is up to you, and the questions at the end of the chapters are not rhetorical: they are meant to be answered in your own words and with your own examples, and not on the spot.

One last thing. Everything written here refers to the structure of a date, not to the person who has that date. A person is wider than any chart, and no page of this report claims otherwise.

What this report does

The report does three things. It shows the calculation: which numbers come out of your date, and by exactly which operation. It gives a vocabulary: how the numerological tradition describes each of those values — from both sides, as support and as cost. And it asks questions for self-observation, which you will answer, not the report. This is material for thinking and for a conversation about yourself, set out without promises.

What it does not do

The report makes no claims about future events and names no dates or deadlines. It gives no medical, legal, financial or psychological advice, and replaces neither a doctor, nor a lawyer, nor a financial adviser, nor a psychologist. It does not grade you: there are no "strong" and "weak" people here, no "good" and "bad" combinations. And it decides nothing for you — this text has no authority to take decisions; that stays your work.

Your numbers: how they were derived

Why we show the arithmetic

We print the calculation itself — what was added to what, and what came out — for one reason: whatever cannot be checked has to be taken on trust. The arithmetic here is simple: any reader can redo it by hand, without us and without a program, and get exactly the same values. It is the only part of the report we stand behind as fact. Everything else here is description, and description works differently.

What the whole name adds up to 5 ·

What this position describes. Every letter of the name carries a digit in this language's table, and their sum reduced is what the tradition calls the expression: the way of acting a person is read as showing outwardly, in work and in company. It is a reading of the name as written, not of the person — spell the same name differently and the number changes, which is a property of the method and is stated rather than hidden.

You are a free spirit. You love change, adventure, and fun. You can do just about anything, though not always very well. You adapt with remarkable ease to just about everything—except rigid structures. Since childhood, you've dreamed of distant lands, new experiences, and the exotic. You'd like to try everything in life at least once. For you, life is a playground, and this can get you into trouble. You may exhaust your biological and social resources without ultimately achieving anything. You have a gift for communication and handle words with ease. You love the new and the unknown. You're a bit of a gambler and often take big risks. You enjoy working with people, but you try to complete your tasks without difficulties or restrictions from others. You're smart and pick things up quickly, but your thought process, like your whole life, is disorganized. Be more thorough and focused if you want to succeed. You tend to fall in love often, but you also cool off quickly, especially in your youth. Move forward and embrace change.

A question to sit with: Which of the traits described here do people name about you first — and would you have named it yourself?

This is a general description. What it means in a specific situation is what a practitioner works through with you.

2

What the vowels are said to want

What this position describes. The same name counted over its vowels only. The tradition reads this as the part that is not on display: what a person is drawn to when nothing is being asked of them. It is built from a separate cipher, so adding up the values in the letter table will not reproduce it.

You love peace and harmony in all their forms. You would like to devote your life to serving others. You fall in love easily. You are very sensitive and emotional. You are sentimental and can be moved to tears by sad stories. You need friends and social interaction. You appreciate the beauty of life. You seek comfort and security. You have good taste. You love music and have remarkable musical abilities. Your sensitivity is a sign of well-developed intuition. You must learn to trust it. You have a noble soul and strive to avoid conflict as much as possible. Develop confidence and the desire to stand up for what you believe in.

A question to sit with: When a week goes quiet and nobody needs anything from you, what do you actually reach for?

Numbers describe how a date is put together. They say nothing about where you are now, who is beside you, what you have already tried and how it ended. That is usually exactly where the question sits that reports like this get opened for — and no page here answers it.

7

What the consonants show first

7 ·

What this position describes. The consonants counted on their own. This is described as the first impression — the part of a manner that reaches a room before anything has been said. The tradition treats the gap between this number and the one above as the ordinary distance between how a person comes across and what they are drawn to, not as a contradiction to fix.

You seem mysterious and unusual. People notice your seriousness and dedication. You are very independent and self-sufficient. Exceptionally intelligent and wise, you command people's respect. You are not the type to attract people with warmth and compassion, though you may possess both; people are drawn to you because of your obvious ability to penetrate the mysteries of life. You are hard to figure out. You often withdraw. People usually notice that you drift off into your own thoughts in the middle of a conversation. You have the manners of an intellectual and an aristocrat.

A question to sit with: What do people assume about you on a first meeting that later turns out to be off?

This is a general description. What it means in a specific situation is what a practitioner works through with you.

The limits of the method

One date, one chart

The calculation rests on the date alone. So everyone born on the same day gets exactly this set of numbers and exactly these descriptions, and there are hundreds of thousands of such people in the world. The method describes the structure of a date, not the person born on that day. Everything that tells you apart from someone born the same day lies outside the calculation, and the report knows nothing about it.

A match is not proof

Reading the descriptions, you will almost certainly think more than once: this is exactly me. It is worth knowing where that feeling comes from. Texts like these are built from formulations that almost anyone recognises in themselves: "you know the doubt before an important step", "you dislike it when others decide for you". Psychologists described the effect back in the middle of the last century and have tested it many times since: people take a description handed to an entire audience as a precise hit. Recognition is a property of the language of descriptions, not a confirmation of the calculation.

What this is good for

It works as a set of formulations for a conversation about yourself: a language that makes it easier to name what you had noticed anyway. It works as a reason to ask a question and compare your version with someone else's. It works as reading for its own sake — an honest and sufficient reason to open the report. It does not work as grounds for decisions that change a life.

Glossary and the basis of the method

Arcanum — the number of a position in the list of values from 1 to 22; traditionally means the vocabulary slot a description is attached to, not a force at work.

Reduction — adding digits down to a single place; traditionally means the way any number in a date is brought to a value from 1 to 9, and in some schools up to 22.

Life path number — the sum of all the digits of the date of birth; traditionally means the general storyline used to describe a date as a whole.

Matrix — the table the numbers of a date are laid out in; traditionally means a set of positions, each with a theme of its own.

Position — a single cell of the chart; traditionally means a topic of conversation, an attitude to money or to the people close by, for instance, rather than a score on it.

Pythagorean square — a grid of nine cells the digits of a date fall into by count; traditionally means a distribution: what a date has a lot of, and what it has none of.

Empty cell — a cell no digit fell into; traditionally means a theme the date says nothing about, not something the person lacks.

Master numbers — 11 and 22, which some schools do not reduce to a single place; traditionally means an agreement about counting, not a special status for the person.

Resource and cost — a pair of descriptions of one and the same quality; traditionally means that a property helps you out in some circumstances and costs a great deal in others.

Tradition — the body of descriptions built up over decades; traditionally means agreement among practitioners, not the result of testing.

Where the values come from

The calculation is formal: the same rules and the same date always give the same result, and you can check it by hand. The descriptions come not from measurement but from an established tradition — decades of practice and agreement between schools stand behind them, but no experiment. The method has no scientific confirmation, and we do not present it as research. We name the source plainly so the reader knows what they are dealing with.

The report is informational and for entertainment. It is not medical, legal, financial or psychological advice, contains no individual recommendations, and is no substitute for consulting the relevant specialist. The calculation follows the formal rules of the numerological tradition; the method has no scientific confirmation, and we do not present it as scientific. Any decisions taken after reading the report remain entirely at the reader's discretion.
